Potential EvacuLane & Potential Contraflow

Texas Department of Transportation

This map illustrates the planned evacuation routes for a potential hurricane on May 23, 2025, across the state of Texas. The routes are color-coded and styled to indicate their status: solid blue lines for major evacuation routes, dashed blue lines for potential contraflow, orange lines for potential evacu lanes, and a combination of orange and blue lines for potential evacu lanes and potential contraflow. The map includes a legend in the top-left corner, a north arrow, and the Texas Department of Transportation logo. Major highways are shown as black lines with their respective route numbers. County names are labeled in orange, and city names are labeled in black. The map covers the entire state of Texas, from the Gulf Coast to the Panhandle.
